

Take your project to a higher level

Participate in the 2014
Scholarly Communication Institute to expand your network of collaborators and jump-start your own project

Put together a working group that includes not just people you regularly interact with, but also people you want to work with but haven't yet been able to.

We'll cover costs for your team to spend four days together in Chapel Hill, NC, in an Institute that's part retreat, part seminar, part development sprint, part unconference.

You set the agenda, you define the deliverables.

We bring everybody together and supply the environment and a network of peers to help stimulate and develop creative thinking and provide a diversity of perspectives about changes in research methods, publishing, digital humanities, digital archives, or other topics related to transformations in scholarly communication.

The 2014 Scholarly Communication Institute will be held November 9-13, at the Rizzo Center in Chapel Hill, NC

See the RFP and FAQ at trianglesci.org
for information on how you can participate.

Proposals are due by March 24

The Triangle SCI is supported by a grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, and hosted by Duke University Libraries in partnership with UNC, NCSU, NCCU, the Triangle Research Libraries Network, and the American Council of Learned Societies.

trianglesci.org
@TriangleSCI

